

Bioregionalism Project

In the weeks leading up to Earth Day 2009, the Biology Department will be studying Bioregionalism, or “the place we live”.

With Monmouth County as our reference point, we will improve our collective Bioregionalism IQ by investigating the natural environment of our home.

Please join us in this fun and important endeavor!

We will share our findings with the Campus Community on Earth Day. We also will Celebrate Earth Day by initiating a Biodiversity Inventory on our Department Website, so that we can begin to document the many life forms we share the campus with.

How to Participate

A set of questions about our bioregion will be posted in the Lobby of MAS every two weeks. Questionnaires can be downloaded and printed from the Biology Department Website (www.brookdalecc.edu/pages/802.asp). Completed questionnaires may be dropped off in the Science Office (MAS049) or given to your instructor. Questionnaires from participants that answered all questions correctly will be entered in a random drawing. Two winners will be selected for each set of questions. Prize: $25 Gift Certificate.
