

Fall 2011

Dear Student:

Welcome to NURS 262, Nursing and Human Needs IV, and congratulations on completing NURS 261. We are excited to have the privilege to facilitate your transition to the RN role. NURS 262 builds upon all previous nursing and non-nursing courses and focuses on the care of patients with alterations in nutrition, absorption, elimination, sensation and perception. This ten-week course is an intellectually rigorous opportunity for you to demonstrate competence in the care of complex patients. This will be a semester of great challenge, diverse experiences and tremendous professional growth. During this semester, you will be amazed at your ability to apply all of your previously learned knowledge, while you refine your efficiency in caring for groups of patients.

During NURS 262, you will access the ANGEL course web site for announcements, updated course information, PowerPoint lecture outlines, review supplements, media presentations, internet links, web sites, and learning activities. In each of the course units, your learning will also be reinforced by a variety of valuable required activities in both the college and computer laboratories

We expect you to read the assigned readings prior to each unit so that you will be prepared to apply theory in the classroom, online and clinical environments. . It will enhance your learning if you actively participate in discussions in both the classroom and in ANGEL based forums by sharing your experiences, thoughts, and stories.

Please feel free to talk to your course faculty about any concerns. We wish you a successful journey through NURS 262.

Sincerely,

Marilee Luick
Nancy Lenaghan,
Helen Loughren
